

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

The present invention provides a tamper proof closure for a vial, which may be used only when needed, by insertion of a security member having engaging means in contact with corresponding engaging means on a ring part of a closure cap so that the cap may not be removed from the vial only with this ring part of the closure cap being separated from the cap by an action exerted by the engaging means of the security member on the engaging means of the ring part.